Its 12 Wonderful Ingredients Simply Make You Over

There are remedies which act on the liver; remedies which help the nerves; remedies which influence the stomach and intestines. But never before has such a remedy as Flaxolyn been compounded. It acts on the stomach, the large and small intestines, the bladder, the kidneys, the stomach, the liver, the lungs, the nerves. It gives the human machine a general overhauling. You begin after the first few doses to feel like a new person. Flaxolyn is a powder and extremely convenient and easy to take. It can harm nobody. It contains no drugs to form habits, no alcohol to stimulate.

Dr. H. H. Luntz, the well known Alsatian physician, spent 20 years developing the Flaxolyn formula. He broke his health down. Was stricken with nervous collapse. His own remedy, Flaxolyn, cured him. This is one of the rare cases where a doctor took his own medicine.

There are 30 Flaxolyn powders in a package. Take one powder in a wine glass of water 30 minutes before each meal. Stir slightly until dissolved.

WM. F. SCHAEFER, M.D., Professor of Surgery in the Chicago College of Medicine and Surgery, says:
Kindly find enclosed endorsement of the merits of your Flaxolyn. It has been clinically and therapeutically tested and we find it corresponding to our claim. I have taken two ounces of it myself and some of our students of the College of Medicine and Surgery, have also taken it and they say it is the most normal laxative that medical science can compound.

SEES FREEDOM FOR IRELAND IN LEAGUE

Samuel Untermyer Pledges His Aid in Erin's Fight For Liberty.

That the League of Nations may be the instrumentality through which Ireland will attain independence is the belief of Samuel Untermyer, expressed in a letter to Judge Daniel P. Cohan.

After pledging his support to the movement to free Ireland from motives of justice and a desire to see the wrongs of centuries righted, the New York attorney, who has represented the Government in a number of proceedings, says he is under a heavy load of personal obligation to many Irish-Americans who helped him when he was "a poor and helpless boy."

Sees No War in League.

Dealing directly with the league as an agency to aid Ireland Mr. Untermyer says:

"I do not agree that Article X requires us to go to war to prevent external aggression on the part of any of the established governments that are parties to the covenant, or in the defense of any country in which we are not directly interested, or that it will prevent us from giving the Irish moral support. To Ireland is its great struggle. The means that we shall adopt in any such event, whether by economic pressure or in any or all of the many other ways that do not involve armed force, are left to the judgment of each nation to determine for itself when the exigency arises."

"Nor do I read Article X or any of the other provisions of the covenant as interfering with the utmost freedom of action by American citizens in their attitude toward Ireland, subject always to the limitation that this country cannot be made the base of revolutionary conspiracies against a friendly nation. There is no reason, however, why one cannot agitate by all peaceful means so as to affect public opinion in Great Britain and elsewhere and in many lawful ways assist in bringing about the desired result."

"Ireland is not logically a part of the British Empire nor is such union necessary for the protection of the latter. It is separated from Great Britain on all sides by the sea, and the Celtic race is as different in every way from the Englishman, Scotchman, or Welshman as can be possibly imagined."

"I am among those who do not believe that Ireland can work out its destiny and achieve the happiness of its people under existing conditions, nor that it needs the protection of the British Empire or is benefited by it. If Ireland could have its own tariff and revenue laws and conduct its own industrial affairs, the genius of its people would in time place it among those in the front ranks of prosperity. If, however, Ireland cannot achieve complete independence by peaceful means at this time, I want to see it, in any event, voluntarily accorded at least a colonial government such as is possessed by Canada, Australia, or New Zealand, which to my mind amounts to virtual freedom, with many of the added advantages that would result from that sort of attachment."

"I am not, however, willing at this critical time in world affairs, to contribute either in money or moral support to, or to be directly or indirectly identified with, any movement for the overthrow of any government by force. Apart from the fact that it would be hopeless and would injure the Irish cause, I fear it would greatly embarrass our government in its relation with a friendly power whose friendship and co-operation it requires in order to carry out the vast international policy of peace and self-determination upon which we are embarked."

Urges Campaign of Peace.

"I have accordingly concluded that inasmuch as the money and all other funds collected by your committee are to be devoted toward a peaceful educational campaign to impress upon and keep before the civilized world the anomalous situation of Ireland and its demand for self-determination, I shall be glad to contribute, and am herewith inclosing my check for $5,000."

"After all, such a campaign will be your most powerful weapon, for your cause is just, and Ireland's wrongs have been and are intolerable. Wedded as I am to the conviction that the league of nations will in the end prove the panacea for the ills of Ireland, that through it we shall have an era of world peace, and that Ireland will soon secure through that agency its long-sought opportunity of determining its own form of government, notwithstanding your view to the contrary, I would oppose the league if I felt otherwise."
